Case Study Overview - Maturity Assessment

Context: supporting a partner to identify their organisational strengths and weaknesses in programme management by conducting an initial maturity assessment of their P3M3 capabilities. An independent assessment was required to provide evidence in support of a major bid that was being constructed for a Highways England partnering competition.

Specific tasks: to audit several programmes and review the working processes to determine maturity in programme ways of working.

Our contribution: Projoun Group are an accredited Axelos P3M3 maturity assessor; three programmes were reviewed to determine an initial assessment of programme management maturity resulting in a report enabling our work partner to respond to a major tender question.

Outcome: The three programmes reviewed were all alliance structured programmes that ollered several challenges to the P3M assessment as an organisational analysis was required. The challenges were overcome and a report providing evidence of the organisations programme ways of working, strengths and areas for development were identified. The results of the assessment were used to indicate organisational maturity enabling our work partner to respond to a specific tender question and independently evidence supporting the bid and later review of tender evidence. The maturity assessment was able to highlight work partner strengths that would benefit the potential client and were supportive of their long-term goals.
